English and koine Greek are both Indo-European languages, so they are distantly related cousins. But Lamogai is a totally unrelated language. So, when we translated the Scriptures into Lamogai, we faced challenges that translators translating into English would never imagine.

The Northern Tepehuan language is a Uto-Aztecan language, not an Indo-European language like Spanish or English. The Uto-Aztecan language family encompasses American Indian languages as far north as Oregon and as far south as Panama. Other Uto-Aztecan languages include those of the Nahuatl, Tarahumara and Cora people—people groups Global Partners has worked among.

"(I) say that because, Anegisemee [God], He really loves the people living on the ground, so He gave His one and only Son on behalf of you people. Since He gave (Him) on behalf of you people, each and every person who thinks, 'It is true,' about Him certainly will not die for their sins. They really, truly won't die but rather certainly just continually live on and on with Anegisemee, exactly like that." John 3:16 (Back-to-English translation)

"But now God He came and did it in this manner! As it is He sent Christ. Christ then He came and died in our place at the time we were (long ago) sinners there still. He did this like this as He is wanting so that we know without doubt how His pleasure/His love is towards us." Romans 5:8 (Back-to-English translation)
